LIGHT THERAPY

Balms are essential to hydrate winter-whipped bods and boost the skin's elasticity, but most are too rich to use once the snow melts. Created by a former chemist and botanist, Mèreadesso Woman Beautiful Body Balm—infused with Brazilian cocoa and olive oil to soothe and unify skin tone—has a light formula that goes on more like a lotion, so it won't leave your skin feeling slippery.

For your chance to win one of 10 Mèreadesso gift sets, visit ellecanada.com/August.

PERSONAL BEST

While you're waiting for Eau de Gaga, why not make like a celeb and build your own scent? Celebrating its one-year anniversary next month, Toronto-based Aromachology blends custom fragrances without hefty price tags or A-list connections. Just fill out a profile to determine your fragrance base (think gourmand or spicy oriental) and then hand-pick three top notes to match your personality. Traditional 'Type A' personalities love the white lily, magnolia and tuberose blend, while more outgoing types gravitate to the nutmeg and honeysuckle mix. □

WHAT'S NEW?

RAW TALENT

If you swear by a raw or vegan diet, there's a new lip balm for you with the same MO. Made with fair-trade, organic ingredients like almond oil and cocoa butter—rather than traditional moisturizers like beeswax—every batch of Hurraw! balm keeps its nutrients because of the low cooking temps used (no higher than 48°C). It also comes in a reusable bag that's perfect for brewing loose-leaf tea.

Hurraw! Lip Balm in Almond, Tinted Cinnamon and Lemon ($4 each). For details, see Shopping Guide.
