

Skincare of Global Proportions

MONDAY, 19 NOVEMBER 2007

Although we'd love to consider ourselves jetsetters, our fancy passport holders don't get as much use as we'd like. And wearing zebra print is a sad substitute for exotic international travel. With the new skin care line Mèreadesso, however, we really are getting a piece of the globe. Cosmetic veteran Linda Stephenson (of MAC and Estee Lauder fame) has created a Face + Neck Toning Gel ($120) and Body Toning Cream ($72) made from unique ingredients sourced from nine different countries.

Think Kola nut seed extract from the North Coast of Africa and grape seed oil from the Tuscan region in Italy. With twenty different antioxidants, eight vitamins and enzymes and sixteen botanical extracts, our skin felt more pampered than a private jet passenger.

And don't let the complicated recipe intimidate you; they're made to work with every skin type and every age and will turn your routine into one simple step. (We can happily kiss toners, under-eye and night creams goodbye.)

Looking this good, we are definitely ready for that weekend in Paris...
